ALEMBIC 1982

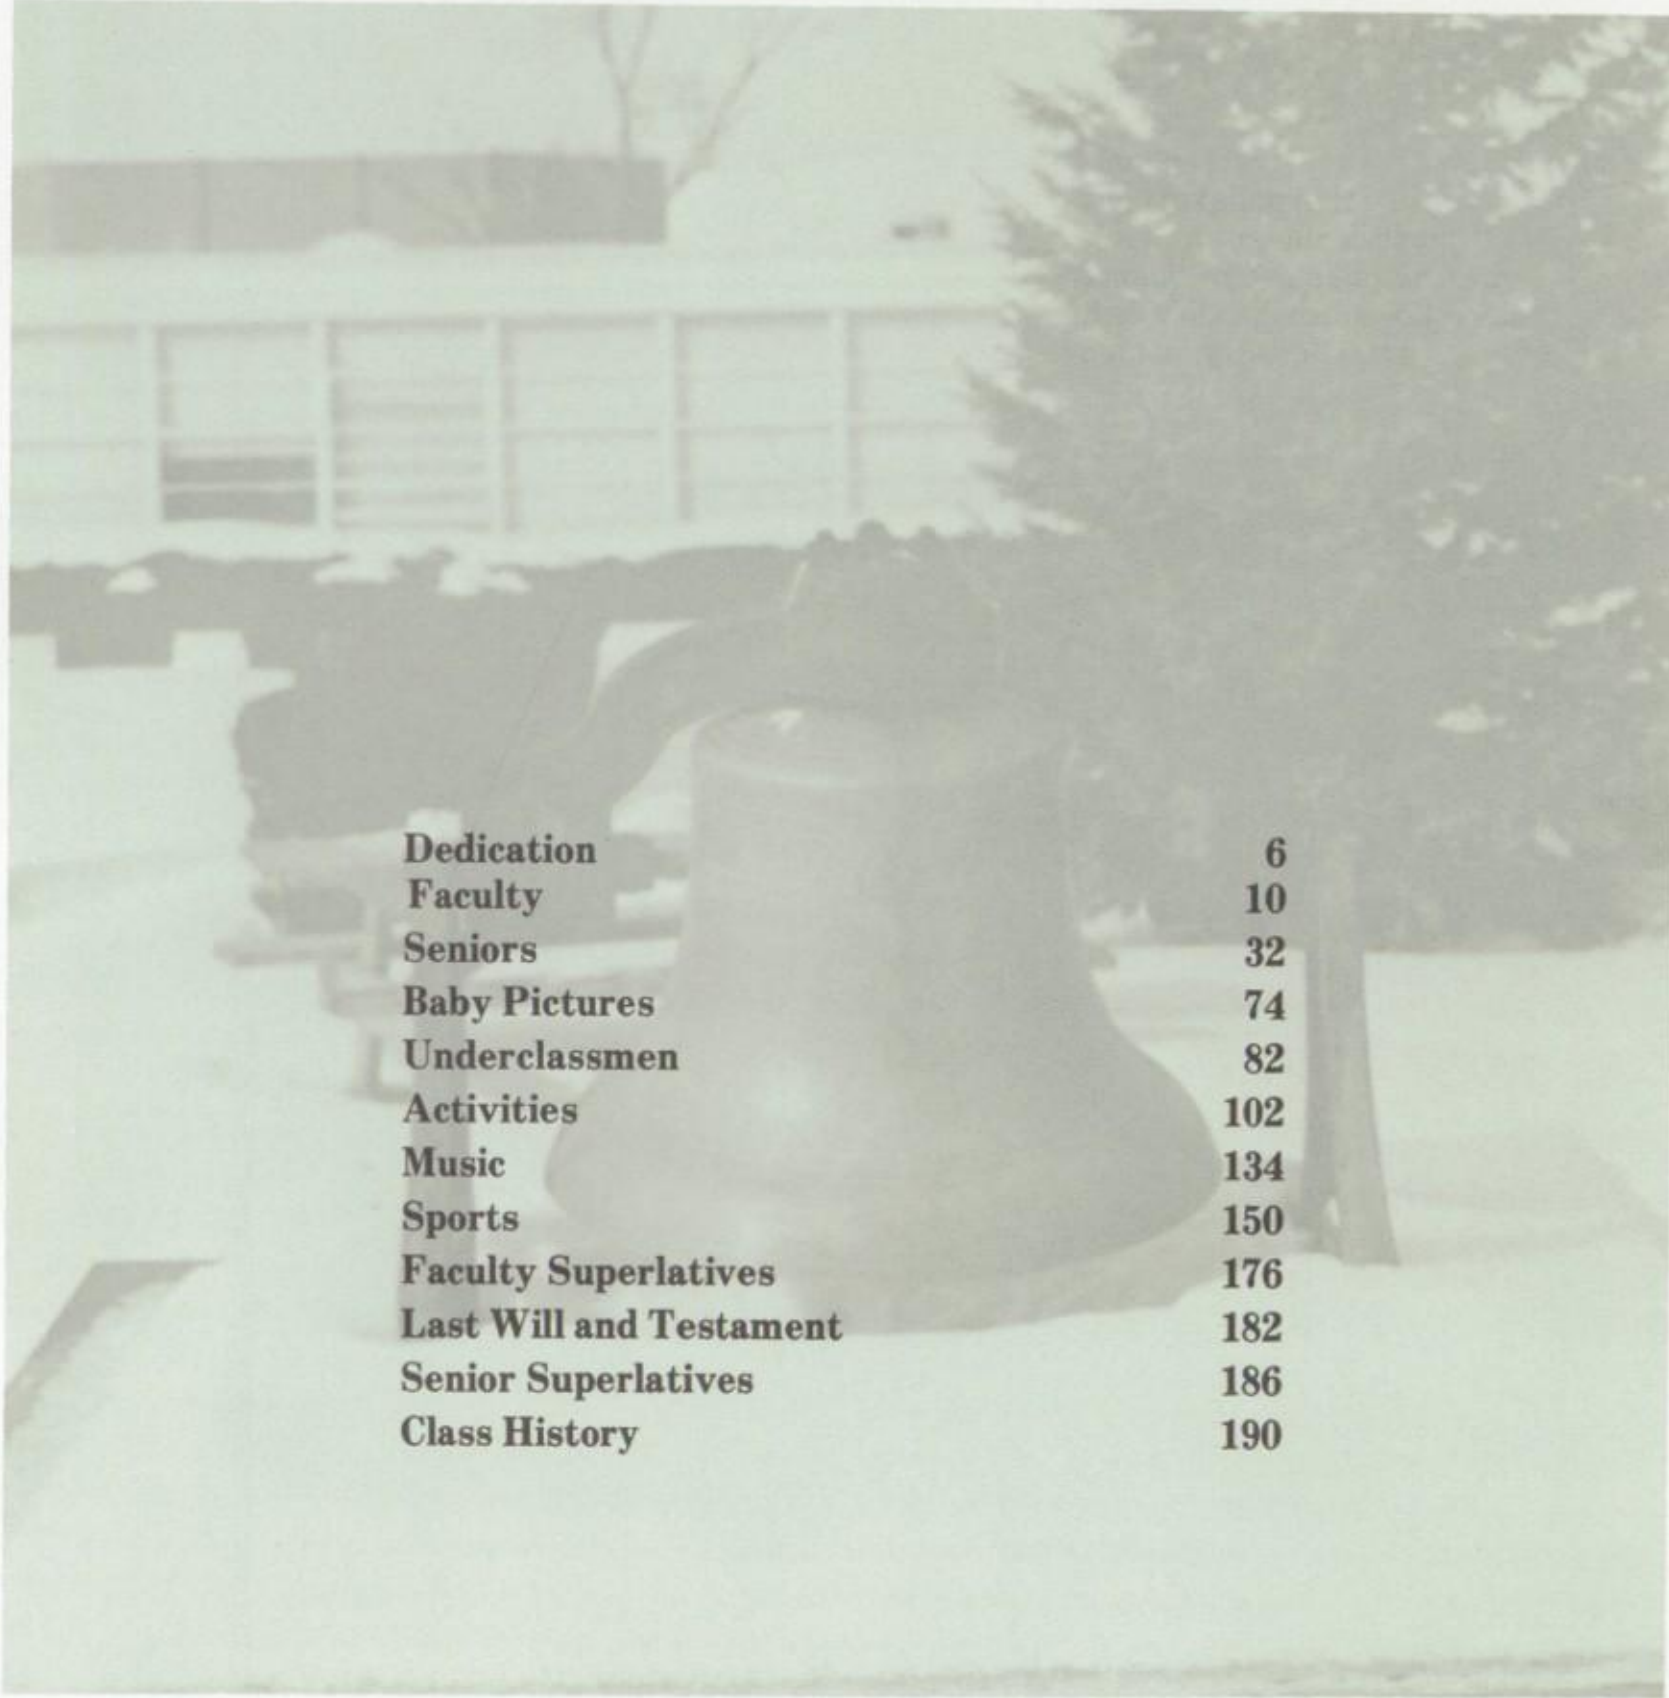

Madison High School
Madison, New Jersey

Reaching upward and broadening one's world is an attribute which is highly valued in today's youth. We all encounter difficulties that we must overcome in order to succeed now and in later life. By conquering these "mountains" which we have set for ourselves, we gain self-assurance, as well as experience and power over all actions and destinies. Throughout our high school years, we have made friends with both fellow peers and faculty, and have shared with them many moments, feelings and emotions. In Alembic '82, the members of the Board and Staff have worked hard to preserve the important segment of our lives which we have spent at Madison High School, and to make it possible for everyone to remember and to value it.

The mountains at dawn are greyly showing
A slow-born presence, like some people's
Who for all their innocence or knowing
Will ne'er make of themselves such cathedrals.
A birth of sorts so new to the seeker
Evokes a strong presence that reaches high,
But soon time makes bright visions grow weaker
As the wells or rock-roots mirror the sky's.
Some will walk to explore this growth-sadder
In their strife to maintain their inspired ways,
But mountains prove to be the wiser matter
Though they know not they're as old as the days
That men shall plan on their mountainous quests
While in the shadows of mountains they rest.
(Life blows through our hair and whispers fast messages
Like winds in tall grasses in mountains not yet risen.)

DEDICATION

Madison High School gained a valuable resource in the 1960's, when Mr. Eugene Caprio accompanied the ninth grade in its move from the Junior School. A well of knowledge and enthusiasm, he developed a teaching technique which demands that students drill for knowledge rather than just spout back information. His combined interest in photography and travel and his work in soil conservation and oil and uranium exploration enable Mr. Caprio to make his earth science courses among the most memorable taught at Madison High School. To be in Mr. Caprio's class is to be exposed to the frozen tundra of Alaska, to feel the tremors of a growing volcano in Paricutin, Mexico, and to explore the depth and beauty of the Grand Canyon.

With this dedication, the Class of 1982 honors Mr. Caprio not only for his teaching in the sciences but for his devotion to the student body. We thank him for his fascinating courses, his wonderful storytelling, and his way of showing us that a good relationship with the students is the most important thing to him at Madison High School.

Spent Summer At Pt. Barrow

One person who wasn't bothered in the least by the heat this summer is Eugene Caprio of Park lane. Caprio spent the summer amid temperatures well below zero on the northernmost bit of American territory—Point Barrow, Alaska.

EUGENE CAPRIO

Caprio's motive for going to Point Barrow was not to escape New Jersey's heat, however, but to hunt for oil with the United States Geological Survey.

The 25 members of the Survey field party, including Caprio, who is a sophomore at Rutgers University, spent seven months traveling over frozen wastes never before trodden by white men, in search of oil, which is believed to exist in vast quantities in northern Alaska. The party lived in "wainigans", wooden dwellings resembling box cars on sleds which were towed from one camp site to another by tractors.

Caprio and his companions located oil at several spots. However, further investigation will have to be done before the extent of the oil resources in this region can be determined accurately, Caprio said.

The method the party used to detect the presence of oil was to set off a miniature earthquake, created by detonating a charge of dynamite deep in the ground, and then measuring with delicate instruments the vibrations it caused in the layers below the earth's surface. If there was oil in the vicinity, its presence could be detected by its vibrations.

Your upcoming graduation is an event which you will view with the anticipation of parties, prom, banquet and ceremonies. My perspective of your graduation is influenced by the twenty Madison High graduates with which I have been associated. It is also influenced by the opportunities I have had recently to meet students who have graduated five, ten or twenty years ago. They have made the transition from students to husband, wife, parent, carpenter, lawyer or businessman.

Each year graduates leave seeking success and happiness. Among the graduates I have seen recently, many are successful — if the amount of money they earn or the prestige which their position carries is a measure of success. Happiness is more difficult to assess than success. It is not something which can be achieved and then you have it forever. It must be earned each day. It is not something to be deferred for the future, nor can it be earned in a vacuum. It must be earned earnestly and shared constantly with others.

As you look to the future, I wish you success and happiness. I hope you look for happiness every day in everything you do not only now, but ten or twenty years from now.

P-O-W-E-R. Power is a very important concept for those graduating to consider. You are at a time in your lives when powers are being conferred on you. The rights and responsibilities of adults are yours. Your futures, educations, careers and lifestyle are up to you. You could cop-out. Adults who don't vote don't use their powers. You could take the easy way; many compromise too often.

My wish is that you use your powers wisely for your sake and ours. Congratulations, and happy trails.....

It has been an eventful four years for all of us, but the most eventful years are coming your way.

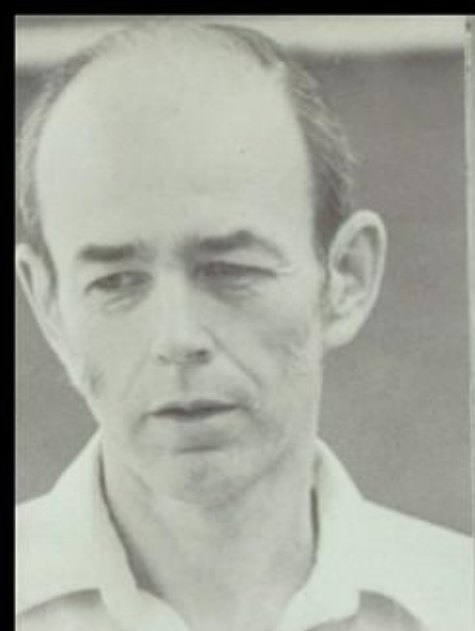

There will be pressures and stress that you will deal with on a daily basis. You will deal with them and not avoid them because you are individuals that people care about. As long as you care about yourself and you care about others, you will never have to fear anything. Share your life with others and you will be a survivor.

We in school can only give you the framework, you have to carry the load and deal with life. I personally have no doubts that all of you will succeed.

ALEMBIC 1982

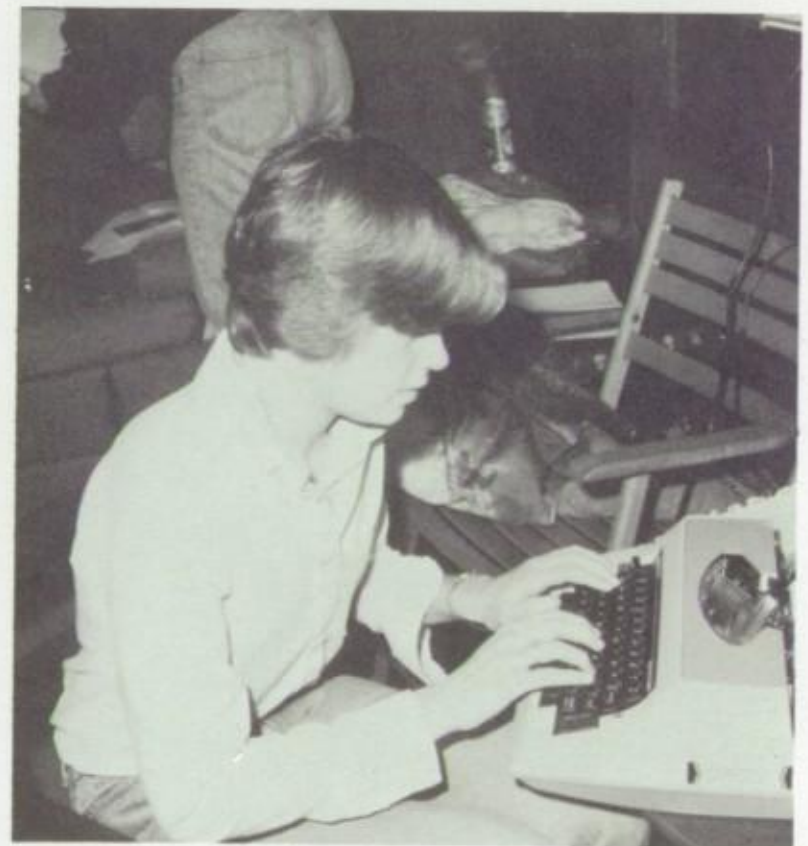

Alembic '82: "borrowing" grey paper, rubber cement, "How many missing write-ups?!" Jeff's phone, "too many pictures of..." "Where's the food?" "Meeting? What meeting? Not today!" "You don't ALL have to go!!" changing deadlines, "It won't be funny in June!," making an '82, "I HATE little grey squares!," Polaroid emergencies, "What pictures? When?" "Maria!... Maria! ... MARIA!! ... Good luck to Alembic '83!"

Diligence in the beginning...

... Fizzles toward the end!

Class activities included a semi-formal dance, a talent show, selling T-shirts, candles, jewelry, and candy. The class will always remember the anxiety instigated by the possibility of hundred dollar prom bids. Luckily, that was proven to be only a rumor, and the Class Council would like to thank all those who participated in helping the class achieve its goals.

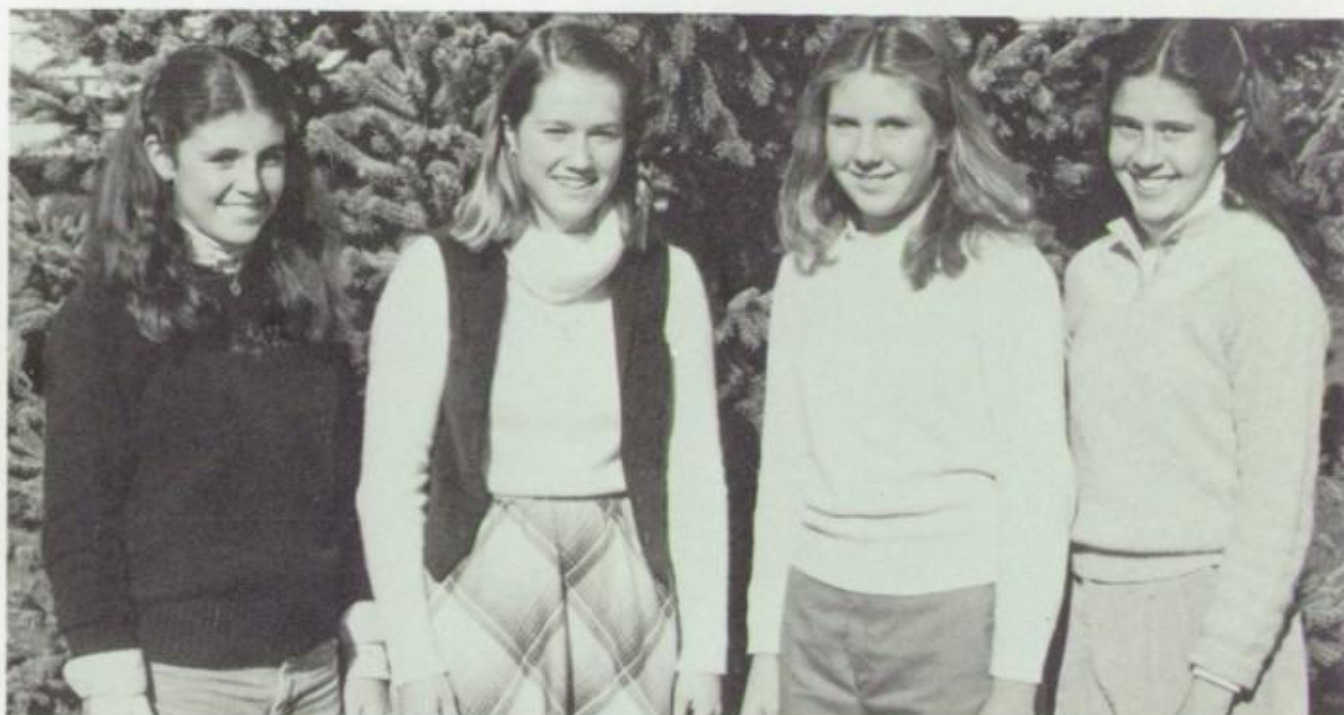

With Mrs. Stromberg as their advisor, the Junior Class has been planning for their Senior Prom and Banquet by selling candy grams and calendars. Other activities included a Valentine's Dance, a disco dance, and a pancake breakfast. With the close of school, the Juniors now eagerly await September '82, when they will finally be at the top, as Seniors.

Other annual club activities enjoyed were decorating the Library and hall showcases in festive, sparkling fashion in December, and a spring trip to a large library in New York City.

Since its birth a decade ago, the Personal Development Program has served as a catalyst in the adaption and personal growth of freshmen at MHS while simultaneously providing upperclassmen with a chance to develop and apply vital leadership qualities. While freshmen are the basis for — and constitute the “bulk” of — this student-run program, it also consists of more than eighty Junior and Senior leaders who are responsible for assisting the freshmen through their challenging first year of High School. Sophomores are also a part of the program, as they are offered the opportunity to observe leadership qualities and serve the community through involvement in the twenty-three member Rookie Program. The Steering Committee consists of twelve Junior and Senior leaders who are responsible for structuring the various units and events which highlight PDP throughout the school year.

Under first year head coach Al Kluck and a whole new corps of assistant coaches who led the Dodgers to a 5-4 record, the football team continued in its winning tradition. They turned in many fine efforts as they again were a major power in the Suburban Conference. Seniors Mike Leeney, Mike Betz, and Craig Kern formed the backbone of this year's Dodger team. Their most impressive game was a trouncing of the Millburn Millers on Thanksgiving by a score of 22-7.

Seeing that Boy's Cross Country had a very young team, it had to work hard for its final 4-10 record. The team was led by senior John Herzog and junior Pete Burchett. Held back by injuries, Nathan Courtney was not able to compete for most of the season which left the burden for three freshmen and a sophomore. The girls' team led by Ann Devlin and Sarah Kitchell had a tough season also. Both teams hope for a healthier and better season next year.

"BANANAS UNITE!", Felipe, Roy Rogers, Irvington, "The BreakfastS," the Soccer team!, RUNNING, wearing pinnies (due to one un-mellow team), Boppin' to the Box!, Dinner at the Monica's, and Oomsie and J.A.

This year's team was "the max" in team spirit. Led by co-captains Lynne McDonald and Regina Femminella, "The Bananas" had a great season. The team's record, 8-8-2, was a vast improvement over last year; however, most impressive was the abundance of team cooperation and enthusiasm. Graduating seniors Lisa, Cindy, Sue, Pam, Lynne, and Regina say farewell, and leave the legacy of one fantastic season to be out-done by next year's team! GOOD LUCK! "Are you ready??-KA!"

SENIORS:

CLONE DAY

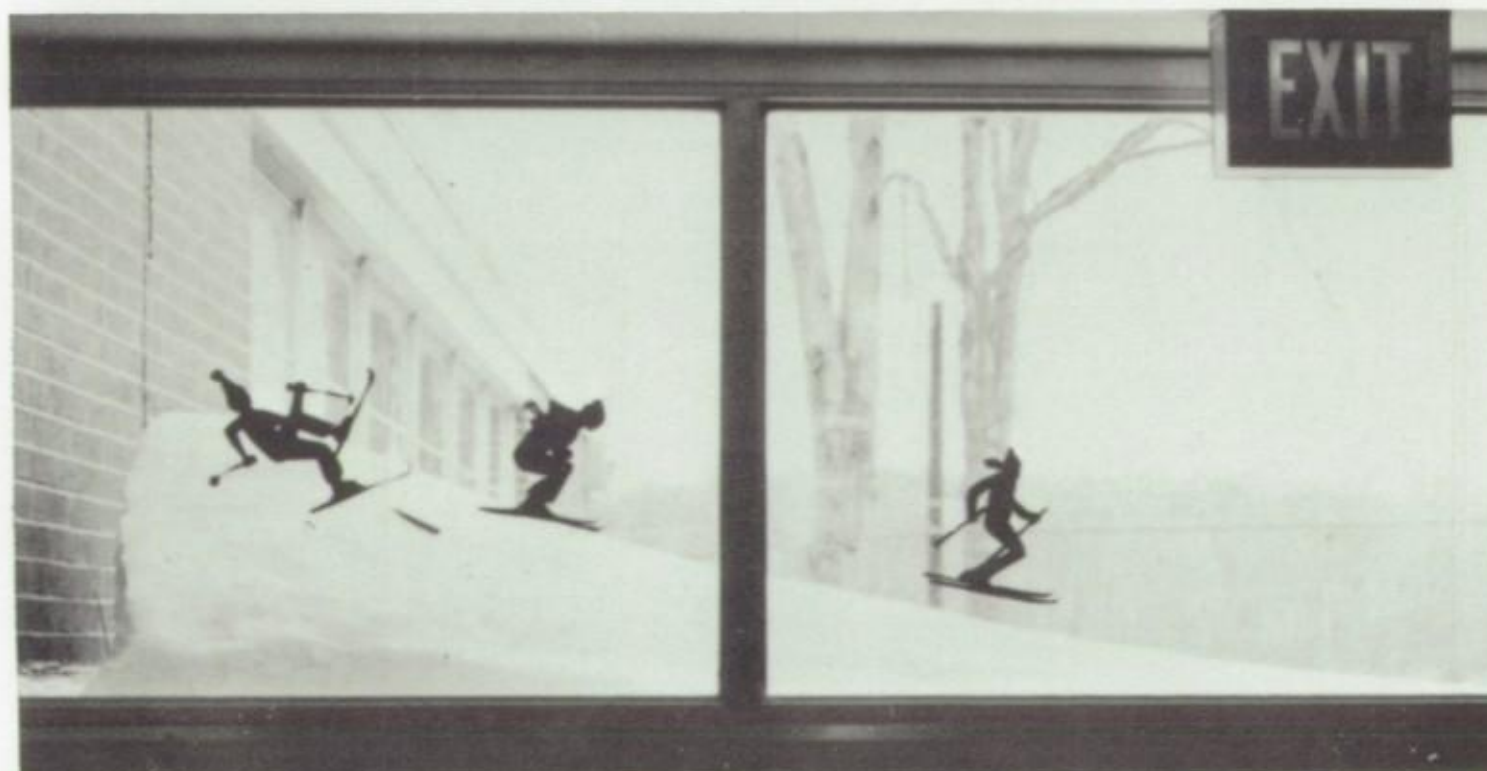

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

We, the members of the graduating class of 1982, being of sound minds (we hope) do hereby set forth our last will and testament. . .

- I, the late Ella Ackerman, leave my place on the MHS stage to Susie Raffman, who deserves it more than I ever did; memories to Kath; lots of smiles to a punny guy; my spikes at home for the Washington trip; my expertise at faking to Maria, who will probably never need it; and many "T's" to Mr. Holl and Mr. Russo.
- I, Archie Allocca, leave the best of luck to C.G.V., C.C. and M.P. Jr. in their school days that lie days.
- I, Jackie Allocco, leave shoe polish to my fellow "A" lunchers, a doorknob, confidence, and iced tea to Brian, a carrot to Orestes, cough medicine and many more B+'s to Mike, lunch time battles and Kentucky to Toto, a frog, my locker, a snarfoutthenose, and my love to Richard.
- I, Michele Allocco, leave to Bozz a full instruction book of yoga. . .
- I, Nancy, Allocco, leave Ben, the lobster, and many long talks to Meyers, the names and bomb to Patty, the runt and the spaz to Nicki, the morning walks to Lori and a lot of good memories to Christine.
- I, B. Apgar, leave to MHS all the crap I had to eat to save my butt and a puy nickel, payment for all my teachers to divide.
- I, Patrick Anderson Esq., being of warped mind and body do hereby bequeath Sid Ponce, my Esq. to Billie-Ricay Richard, a set of wooden choppers to Andrew, and a V's up to Mrs. Suffragette (suffer the little chauvinists) with cyanide chaser.

CLASS HISTORY

Freshman year, 1978-79

Our freshman year marked the end of a decade, but to the class of 1982 it meant a beginning. Although none of us were quite sure of exactly what it was a beginning of, we all had our ideas—our dreams, our reservations, our inspirations and contemplations as freshmen at Madison High School. For some, it was the beginning of a brand-new game based on an extensive list of rules, a game which required breaking these rules to accumulate points—and the object, for most skilled participants, was to receive as few points as possible. This “game-to-end-all-games” was, of course, the Personal Assessment System, and the Class of '82 was the first to play this game for four years at MHS. In-school-suspension—that ephemeral grand prize offered to high-scorers—came and went in 1979.

For those of us to whom breaking rules was not such an appealing form of diversion, PDP was there to ease our adjustment to high school and to offer us a tool to break the barriers which separated us from the rest of the student body. Academically, we found ourselves in a new world where decent grades actually required effort, and college was no longer merely a “distant place where you went when you got older and wiser.” We began to see eye to eye with teachers—literally, at least—and faculty members like Mr. Caprio introduced the concept of teacher-as-friend.

Our school was bursting with pride as Monica's men had an incredible winning season which culminated in a victorious state championship game at the Meadowlands.

Reminded of our inherent insignificance by occasional encounters with those suave, experienced, BIG seniors, we accepted each other—yes, even Harding students—and began to somewhat resemble a “class.” Mr. DiLorenzo was the first of two class advisors, and the class raised a substantial amount of money, only to face a new financial beginning the following September. (What ever did happen to all of that hard-earned money?)

As we left our freshman year in June of 1979, after suffering through still another foreign concept—a week of final exams—we bid farewell to a year of adjustment, oblivious to what MHS held in store for us in the three years that remained of our high school career.

The dismal state of world events highlighted by the Hostage Crisis and extensive boycotts had little effect on the class of 1982. For we were now Sophomores; we were in control of things—we thought. Having survived dreaded Freshman Year, we knew all of the tricks needed to survive at MHS, and our arrogance seemed justified. But in reality we were about as secure as our class treasury, which, under the supervision of Mr. Dennis Sayer, saw a new beginning with jewelry sales and other money-making innovations.

On September 7th, Hurricane David caught us all off-guard, dumping enough snow on us to warrant our earliest snow day ever.

Along with the debut of preppiness and punk as fads at MHS came a more serious pre-occupation: “No Nukes.” After the accident at Three-Mile-Island and the emergence of various celebrities and artists against nuclear power, it was evident that the silent generation (relatively speaking) of the 80's now had something to shout about. The reinstitution of draft registration by now means silenced us, although we would not be affected for a few years.

The soccer team emerged as a powerhouse for the first time while football continued in its winning tradition.

Although school became more challenging, we began to explore new forms of diversion. We started to attend “real” parties regularly, and the Meadowlands was suddenly more than just “Giants' Stadium” as concert-going became a new alternative to parties. Some of us will never forget the Eagles' concert there.

When spring rolled around, most of us were more than ready to finish an exhausting sophomore year, but an unfamiliar buzz of enthusiasm could be sensed toward the end of April. Twenty sophomore PDPers knew all too well that this was the result of that indescribable experience known as the Rookie Retreat, one weekend at the shore which will not soon be forgotten.

Junior Year, 1980-81

Being a Junior meant being an upperclassman—finally. But the apparent freedom associated with the word “upperclassman” must have been hidden somewhere beneath all of the pressures accompanying Junior Year. Remember that first term paper? And who could forget those acronyms which began to control our lives? PSAT, SAT, ACH, CEEB — TESTS!!! So that's what all that hard work was for!

It was a year of defeat and triumph at MHS. Operation “F” stood for “failure” as our ailing treasury continued to suffer. Monica's men failed for the first time in thirty-eight games while the Baseball and Swim Teams emerged as county champs.

In December we joined the 60's generation in a painful farewell to a hero who changed our lives through a decade of music only to find ourselves elatedly welcoming over-night heroes a month later as the Hostages arrived in New York.

With our new licenses we could now drive ourselves anywhere, and anywhere seemed to be the perfect place. Devo shouted “Whip it!” as punk attire, punk dances, and sometimes infamous punk parties drew us in and punked us out.

Spring meant trips to MHS. First it was the Music Department's journey to Virginia followed by Mr. Holl's art trip to D.C. Mr. Sayer and his “biology” clan will never forget their seven strenuous days spent in tropical Barbados while the rest of Madison was enjoying the wonderfully typical April weather at home.

Some were fortunate enough to attend the senior prom, only to be painfully reminded of their remedial duties while fighting off headaches and visions of “the shore” the following day in school. Whether or not we were prom dates, we were all certain of one thing at the end of Junior Year: Madison High School was now ours, and we were more than ready to take over as seniors.

Senior Year, 1981-82.

Entering MHS in September of 1981, we appeared to be a separated class. The clique—that over-used word redefined by MHS students to mean “a group of friends whose sole purpose is to assure the existence of jealousy and animosity between itself and other entities like it”—was not a word unknown to our class. Yet, although it did not seem possible, we all had a few things in common: we were, of course, all seniors—a distinction earned by three long years of uncertainty and abuse; we all had our futures to worry about, as they were practically staring us in the face; and finally, we were well aware of the possibility of $100-plus prom bids. Our class had a new government, one elected on the premise that 1981-82 would mean nothing more than unadulterated financial progress from the Class of '82. Chris Pacifico worked diligently along with his “cabinet”, selling everything from candles to candy and more than pacifying our thirsty treasury.

Fall was a time for music—great music, rare musical events. To many, the “sound of silence” was that which filled the halls in the absence of MHS's “Animals” of '81, but to those who joined the four-hundred thousand in Central Park on a September weekend to witness the reunion of Paul Simon and Art Garfunkel it meant reliving history through song. A month later, the Stones tour began, and a ticket to the concert was but a dream to most.

Athletes made the news as Monica stepped down from the football throne to be replaced by guidance counselor Al Kluck. Goalie-journalist Danny Beaman exposed the thrills of senior bench-warming on the soccer team while the football team rolled in the mire of disgrace after waging a mud-war on visiting runners from Summit.

As seniors, we were faced with many changes. Our lockers were reassigned; lunch lines grew, and a new attendance system served as an effective antidote to certain symptoms of “senioritis”. With “instructional skills” came the emergence of substitutes as familiar faces, and in January certain students were reportedly still struggling to learn their teachers' names. We knew MHS would never be the same when we lost such greats as Yurko, Demartino, and Tremallo, but Miss Yatrakis was back to brighten our lives through foreign language and PDP. And what would senior year be without “The Buch” — that tyrannical teddy-bear of the “Throne of Physical Science.”

The glory of senior year became a myth as the horror of college applications enslaved us and held us in suspense. After careful contemplation we barraged teachers with requests for recommendations, wondering the whole time if there truly were any teachers who could stand us as students. Eventually we all received word, and we could now sit back and relax.

Highlighted by tales of late weekends and a week-long, well-attended cabin rendezvous in the mountains, winter passed by, and we experienced something very foreign to the Class of '82; we were growing—together. Gradually, our youthful grudges subsided, and we realized that, although we were intensely different in so many respects, we could tolerate one another, and we began once again to resemble a class. Although as we pursue our various goals, our paths will seldom cross, we will remember each other for the four years of growth and change which we experienced together at Madison High School.
